Module Description

This course is designed primarily to enable the students to understand the kinetics of drug absorption, distribution and elimination. Different pharmacokinetic models following different routes of drug administration will be discussed. This course prepares the students to utilize the pharmacokinetic parameters to individualize patient therapy more rationally. Specialized software applications will be employed to learn scientific means to assess doses, their time intervals and frequency via various routes of administration.