Module Description

The course introduces the students to the basic knowledge of psychology. It is intended to enable students to identify basic psychology problems that patients commonly suffer during stress and illness. The course further focuses on the development of the human personality according to various psychological theories.