Module Description

The provision of this module defines the framework concept of health and the impacts of nutrition and environment on thereon. Further, it illustrates how diseases occur, spread and transfer. Also, the course explains the significance of immunity and immunization, types of immunological products and their dose schedules. Further, it delineates the principles of disease control and prevention, hospital acquired infection, prevention and control. Besides, students will also gain insight into disinfection and its role in limiting infections and contamination.